

ALL ABOUT POKER

Poker. It's one of the world's most beloved games, exciting for the novice and the expert alike. While the basic version is relatively simple, poker's many variants add degrees of challenge and diversity. Fostering an ever-present competitive fire within players, and providing entertainment and mind-sharpening skills, poker is a timeless game with a diverse player population.

Why plays poker?

There are just as many compelling reasons to play poker as there are variations of the game! Just as each person has a unique set of personality traits, each poker player has a different set of reasons for joining the game. For a brief, and by no means comprehensive, list of motivating reasons, poker is....

- ...entertaining. The combination of skill and luck makes it fun to see the results of each round; an infinite number of results and hands are possible with each game, providing suspense as well as a compelling cycle of concealing-and-revealing.
- ...mind-sharpening. Learning to use logic in poker plays, as well as strategic skills throughout the game, stimulates the mind and improves reasoning skills. Because the game demands quick-thinking and pure tactics, poker players get a dose of exercise for the mind each and every time they play.
- ...perception-refining. Developing an ability to "read" other players and to pay attention to the details they try to conceal hones players' perceptive skills. With a heightened sense of awareness and acuity, many poker players discover the birth of a "sixth sense" of observational power – an invaluable ability in many situations outside the poker game!
- ...competitive. Many players have likened the competitiveness of poker to the spirited fight felt by athletes in a sports match, or the energetic hopes of the fans cheering on the sidelines. But, unlike other wagering games that rely mostly on luck and chance, poker is a highly "winnable" game – with a good set of skills and sound playing strategy, winning the pot is highly likely, and the odds are not left to mere chance.
- ...profitable. While not every player can win every game, poker definitely provides the opportunity to make a profit. The desire to win helps to fuel a quick skill set development, and speeds the learning process.

With a game that offers so much to its players, there are even more advantages for those who choose to play online poker! Playing online negates the need to drive to a casino, allows players to participate in complete privacy and provides access to customer support 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Online poker is safe, fun, fair, secure and regulated, which ensures that every player is treated fairly and has a great poker experience, every time.
